

Learning Objectives

Discovering Your Narrative Voice — Revised for a Closed-Platform, Justice-Involved Audience

Audit Note: What the Original Module Stated

The original module never states a learning objective anywhere in its 14 screens. Section titles imply topic ("Introduction to Storytelling," "Narrative Voice," "Style Analysis"), but nothing tells the learner what they should be able to do differently once they finish. This isn't a platform or audience problem — it's a baseline instructional design gap that would exist for any learner. The objectives below are written for the revised module and don't assume the original had any to revise from.

Terminal Learning Objective

By the end of this module, the learner will be able to identify the core structural elements of a story and apply a distinct narrative voice to an original piece of writing that reflects their own perspective — using only content and interactions available within the platform, without requiring outside reference material or an internet connection.

That last clause isn't filler. On a general e-learning platform it would go without saying. On a closed platform it's a real constraint the objective has to name, because "apply a narrative voice" quietly used to mean "apply a narrative voice, assuming you can also navigate to three external websites first."

Enabling Objectives

Each maps to a specific section of the revised module. Written in behavioral terms — observable, not just "understands" or "is aware of."

Module Section	Enabling Objective — Learner Will Be Able To...	Maps To
Storytelling Elements(Screens 3-4)	Define and distinguish plot, character, setting, conflict, theme, point of view, style, and tone when given a short example of each.	Screens 3-4 accordion
Narrative Voice Intro(Screen 6-7)	Describe narrative voice as the blend of personality, style, and perspective a writer brings to a piece, without relying on outside examples to understand the concept.	Screen 6 title, Screen 7 video (revised, skippable)
Voice Switch Activity(Screen 8)	Rewrite a given short story excerpt in a different narrative voice or character's perspective, using only the excerpt embedded on-screen.	Screen 8 (revised, embedded excerpt)
Style / Character Analysis(Screen 9-11)	Construct a character profile that identifies a character's motivations, internal conflicts, and relationships — not just observable surface traits.	Screen 11 (revised prompts)
Conclusion(Screen 12)	Connect the concept of narrative voice to a real writing context outside the module (e.g., a personal letter) without the module requiring them to disclose or discuss their own circumstances.	Screen 12 (revised closing line)

Access & Completion Objectives

These aren't content objectives — they don't describe what the learner knows or can write. They describe what the learner has to be able to do just to reach the content objectives above, given the constraints defined in the Needs & Audience Analysis. A module can fully meet every enabling objective above and still fail these, which is exactly what happened in the original version.

Access & Completion Objective	Why This Has to Be Stated Explicitly
Complete the entire module without needing an active internet connection at any point.	The original required outbound navigation on screens 5 and 8. If either fails on a closed platform, the learner can't tell whether they made a mistake or the app is broken — see Task & Content Analysis, screens 5 and 8.
Control the pace of any video content, including the option to skip without penalty.	The original hard-locked two video screens with no skip control. Removing the learner's ability to choose when they're ready contradicts the trauma-informed principle the module is otherwise supposed to model.
Recover from any wrong tap or navigation error without losing progress or needing outside help.	No IT support is available on demand in a facility setting. An error state that requires troubleshooting help outside the module is a dead end, not a minor inconvenience.

Note on Scope

These objectives describe the revised module only. They don't retrofit the original into a reentry-specific or therapeutic curriculum — the subject is still creative writing craft. What changed is that the objectives now account for the platform the learner is actually on and the population actually using it, which the original silently assumed rather than stated.
